THE SULLIVAN ESTATE & SPA RETREAT:

HAWAIIAN ALCHEMY FOR A MEMORABLE VACATION

BY RAY FLORIO

In the sacred place of Hawaii, water is the ultimate source of mana, or energy. "Wai wai" literally means "water water," the Hawaiians' definition of wealth, which means being wealthy with plenty of energy. Native Hawaiians look at wealth as an all-encompassing concept that purely stems from the environment. The Sullivan Estate, located on Oahu's North Shore, reflects this concept perfectly and sets the standard as a wellness center, retreat, spa, resort and hotel all in one with its luxurious amenities. The Sullivan Estate has it all.

Known as the world's first holistic anti-stress center, The Sullivan Estate is not only the North Shore's landmark for healing and tranquility, but also for extreme luxury, privacy, exclusivity and fun. Walls, lava rocks and lush gardens that surround the estate and its endless walkways create an enclosed personal environment that is still connected to the limitless feeling of nature. Reputed for its phenomenal, personalized service, the estate provides guests with their own butler, private chef, cook and concierge. A number of activities are available onsite, including a luau show and dance and art classes. Available just beyond the gates of the property are helicopter rides, professional surfing lessons, hiking tours, kayaking excursions, mountain biking and an endless variety of other adventures and fitness activities. Rejuvenation is high on the list for guests, as well, with the understanding that one does not have to be sick in order to need renewal and reawakening.

Set on 5.2 acres, this pristine eco-estate includes a 5,600 square foot, six-bedroom house with solar powered electricity and hot water. It has an oversized two-car garage and four distinctively designed bedrooms, including two suites. The master bedroom suite has a private sitting room, balcony and Roman bath, and comes fully stocked with organic snacks and delicacies. The estate's chlorine-free saltwater pool and jacuzzi provide magnificent views of the ocean, and two separate exercise rooms offer the most cutting edge equipment for a highly energized workout.

With an increasing number of guests being interested in organic, "green" living, The Sullivan Estate operates under holistic guidelines and has high standards for the maintenance of the grounds and home, including the use of products such as organic linens and towels. These elements make it easy for guests to carry on their personal green practices while they are vacationing. At the OlaLoa Health Gourmet Café, the food is prepared with produce from the estate's own gardens which are free of pesticides and chemical fertilizers. Fresh ingredients such as Manoa lettuce, Swiss chard, Hamakua tomatoes and an array of herbs are harvested for the chef's daily food preparations. The lettuce makes the most satisfying crisp green salad a guest could imagine and the lemongrass is brewed into a vibrant and refreshing herbal tea that can be served iced or hot.

Say "Aloha" To A New World of Spa

The JK7-OlaLoa Spa and Wellness Retreat, located onsite, is a holistic therapy center that uses four natural medicine treatment methods — aromatherapy, color therapy, sound therapy and Dead Sea saltwater flotation therapy, resulting in a one-of-a-kind spa experience that enlivens and nourishes the seven senses. Guests are freed of the negative effects and stress of everyday life. They can transform their body, mind and spirit by emptying themselves of the impurities that accumulate in their memories and sensory systems, and replacing them with a revived and rejuvenated body, mind, and spirit that fosters balanced thoughts and feelings. The spa menu includes massages, facials and yoga and meditation sessions as well as steam, infrared, cold plunge and hydro bath treatments in addition to many other choices.

Each spa treatment has its own room to establish a distinct mood for that particular therapy.

For a long time now, ever since "The King" Elvis Presley has been rumored to visit, The Sullivan Estate & Spa Retreat has changed the way people are able to vacation. Like the transmutation of lead to gold, fear to love and resistance to openness, The Sullivan Estate has transformed people's vacations from being harmful or a mere escape into being an invigorating, educational experience that inspires a feeling of wholeness.

Dr. Juergen Klein, creator of The Sullivan Estate reveals, "Our guests truly adopt the Estate as their own, so that by the time they are ready to depart, they feel a strong connection to the space. The memories created when they visit us make them want to come back so they can relive that special time again. Our guests often comment on how happy and healthy they feel because of our holistic approach. Being here gives them new tools so that when they return to their daily lives, they have a new and possibly even better approach to living. Returning often renews that sense of wellbeing and 'resets' their intentions towards a happy and healthful existence."
